This is a nice set for the price. It is very beginner, the books do not progress in level, one book is just as easy as the next and the 7 pages in the books are very very repetitive. If your child is at the point where they are learning to point at a word to read and you are looking for a sight word(dolch) readers set. These are the books for you.These books do not build on one another like leveled readers do. Each book addresses a sight word or two and are independent of the other books in the set.an example:(that is the words for the entire 7 pages in the book.Hello, sun.Hello, Sand.Hello, shell.Hello, Crab.Hello, gull.Hello, sail.Well, Hello, whale!another example:I add the banana.I add the ice cream.I add the chocolate.I add the whipped cream.I add the nuts.I add the cherries.We share dessert!I would prefer a beginner reader that switches the words around a little more, so they aren't quit so easy to just remember with out looking at the words in the sentence.But young children will find these rewarding to read until they become more confident readers.

This product is neatly packaged and a good price. I'm a licensed teacher who purchased these to teach son how to read. These books include high frequency words, but not enough words to decode. For instance in the book Bubbles the author wrote the following: "Bubbles in my drink." Instead she should have written "Bubbles in my cup." It would have had the same meaning and would fit with the picture. This change would give an emergent reader the opportunity to practice decoding. CVC (consonant -vowel -consonant) words are a good starting place. I saw this over and over within all of the books. They really aren't good for beginning readers, but are fine for a little later on. After purchasing these and being a bit disappointed I searched and found some better options. I really LOVE Lakeshores Sight Word Readers! They have a fiction and non-fiction set. My son conquered these quickly, and it really helped his esteem as a beginning reader. My list of alternatives that are great for first time readers:1. Lakeshore Fiction Sight Word Readers2. Lakeshore Non-Fiction Sight Word Readers3. Starfall Set4. Bob Books Sets (There are several of these on .)

This set was an instant hit with my 5 yr old daughter. She is just starting to learn the basics of reading in Kindergarten and I was looking for something to read at home that will help her practice. The books are all 8 pages long with very simple and repetitive sentences that are great for new readers. The best part was that she was able to feel the accomplishment of reading a whole book by herself. It didn't matter to her that the stories were short, just being able to read something cover to cover was great for confidence building. Since we have had them she has been reading these little stories nonstop. These books would only be suitable for children at the very beginning stages of reading and not for a child that is a little older. I would recommend these books for Kindergarten level reading only, but well worth the investment as a supplement the phonics programs they work on at school.

My daughter is too smart for her own good sometimes LOL. Her teacher said to get her started on reading. So I went on my search for some easy beginner reading books. I found these and the first time we tried them we both got frustrated and it didn't go very well (I'm NOT a great teacher) Talking with my cousin last night she suggested just to go with the flow basically and we can always re-read the story and not to dwell on each page. We tried that and she did it! She was so excited and she read to daddy and we all celebrated. She actually GOT IT! I had NO doubt she wouldn't get it, but still it was amazing seeing her face light up and her being confident in herself and not giving up. If your child is ready to learn to read I highly recommend this set of First Little Readers. There are 25 different stories and they basically just repeat themselves and they have great illustrations for the child to see the picture that represents the word they are trying to read. For example: I like to paint. The picture is a child painting. Once they get the "I like to" ... the rest they connect with the picture. There is only 7 pages which is great so they don't get bored. Check out these books they are well worth it.

When my little girl started to read, I wanted to get her something that was easy and not to long. After doing some research, I was very disappointed. A lot of the books had really long sentences and not good for the super beginner reader. They were also a little to long and would not keep my girl interested. My girl had just learner her letted and we were not looking for something to get us past cat and hat. This box was a great opportunity. THe little readers set comes with books that have very few pages. I think about 6 pages per book which is perfect. Another plus is that each book has only one short sentence with a lot of repetition. The only flaw is that these book did contain some more advanced words like Beach but we took this as a learning opportunity. I noticed that each book only had one difficult word or rule so before reading each book we learned the rule and then got to practice it multiple times. The topics of each book are great. They focus on things kids love like school and holiday. With so many choices to choose from I had something for every mood my little one was in. Overall, I think these books are great for a child who is looking to take reading to the next level but still gets overwhelmed by text. These books are a lot of fun and will keep your child interested while intruding new complex rules to them. My little girl loves choosing her books and I am sure your little one will to.
